WOMEN REGRET THEY HAVE BUT TWO MORE NIGHTS TO ATTEND COOKING SCHOOL; INTEREST IS VERY KEEN

Days Spent by Women in Thoughts of the School, and Evenings in Enjoyment of Classes Under Direction of Miss Grace Burroughs — Recipients Pleased With Gifts

One regret is paramount in the hearts of Bristol women!

The Courier cooking and home-makers' school will continue but for two more nights, tonight and Friday evening.

Throughout each day the housewives think of the approaching evening, and its entertaining instruction under the guidance of Miss Grace Burroughs, of the DeBoth organization. The evening meal is started earlier and the dishes hurriedly washed. Mother and wife must be at St. James's parish building early for the seats are at a premium.

Then two hours of intense and helpful demonstration take place, Miss Burroughs, the lecturer, having the eager attention of all until closing time.

Then home to sweet dreams, which no doubt are permeated by odor of goodies.

Many last night, no doubt, had visions of spaghetti loaf, California mock turkey, cinnamon coffee cake, and a delicious chocolate cake. And some not only had dreams, but their dreams came true, for these were presented to several as gifts.

Through cooperation of Courier advertisers, national and local, there were many gifts last evening. The California mock turkey was presented to a fortunate woman, and with it was given the large aluminum roaster. Besides the useful gifts there were loaves of bread, boxes of flour, packages of Rinsol, and many other things.

The second session was opened by Mrs. Russell Johnson, a member of the Courier staff, who extended a hearty welcome to the 500 attending. Mrs. Johnson presented Mrs. Percy G. Ford, who introduced the lecturer, Miss Burroughs. At the conclusion of the school the hostess was presented with a bouquet of flowers.

There are but two nights remaining for the Courier cooking school. Promptly at seven o'clock tonight and tomorrow the doors of St. James's parish building will open to admit the eager cooks. Radio music, made possible through installation of a Majestic by M. C. McCole, will entertain until 7.45, and then the class will open. The next two hours will pass all too swiftly.

Twenty-five bags filled with groceries and household products, as well as other useful and valuable gifts will be presented again this evening, and then tomorrow there will be presentation of the grand gifts for the week. Be early tonight, you will profit by the session.

FORCED OFF ROAD, MAN IS BADLY HURT

Driver Blamed in Accident is Held After Two-Mile Chase

EN ROUTE TO PHILA.

LANGHORNE, Nov. 12.—Forced off the road, witnesses declare, by a motorist who failed to stop after causing the crash, A. H. Johnson, 42 years old, of Springfield, Mass., was critically injured early last evening on the Lincoln Highway near the Langhorne Speedway. He is now in Frankford Hospital, Philadelphia, suffering from a possible fracture of the skull, fracture of the right leg and probable internal injuries.

Johnson was on his way to Philadelphia where he had planned to open an agency for a New England soap company when the accident occurred. The driver of the other car is declared to have been Wyatt Beverly, 45 years old, of Lansdowne, Pa.

Witnesses state that Beverly, also traveling toward Philadelphia, crowded Johnson off the road while passing his machine. Johnson's car ran into a ditch at the side of the road and crashed into a telegraph pole. The impact caused the pole to snap half way up, leaving the upper portion hanging by the wires.

C. J. Keiser, of Philadelphia, who saw the accident, overtook Beverly after a two-mile chase and detained him until the arrival of Highway Patrolmen Dim and Coughlin. They arrested Beverly on a hit-and-run charge. Beverly declared he did not know he had caused an accident.

GETS JAIL TERM FOR KILLING TWO WITH HIS AUTO

Alvin McEntee Given Two to Three Years In Jail

STRONG PLEA IS MADE

Defendant's Uncle Asks The Court for Light Sentence

DOYLESTOWN, Nov. 12.—Alvin McEntee, 37-year-old Bridgeton Township lumberjack, whose excessive imbibition in hard liquor while driving automobiles, led to the death of two people on different occasions, was sentenced to the Bucks County Prison for a minimum sentence of two years and a maximum of three years.

President Judge Hiram H. Keller pronounced sentence after the defendant's uncle, Stace B. McEntee, of Doylestown, asked the Court to not impose a sentence that was so severe that "Alvin's spirit would be broken."

"Alvin has only one bad habit and that is drink," Mr. McEntee remarked to the Court. "Aside from that habit he is a hard-working, righteous man. I do not approve of such conduct of which Alvin has engaged, but I do ask that the sentence be as lenient as possible."

Last May while McEntee was driving an automobile on the Lackawanna Trail, Frank Esser, who was riding with him, was fatally injured, when the car crashed into a pole. A jury acquitted McEntee of a charge of involuntary manslaughter but convicted him of driving a car while drunk.

The following week after the first trial, McEntee was convicted of involuntary manslaughter in connection with the death of Officer Levi Headman, in charge of the bridge over the Delaware River between Upper Black Eddy and Milford, N. J. He was also convicted of failure to stop and render assistance to an injured party. Headman died in the Easton Hospital after being struck by McEntee's truck on the evening of August 24.

Stace B. McEntee withdrew a motion for a new trial that had been filed in behalf of his nephew.

On the bill charging operating an automobile while drunk, McEntee was sentenced to serve six months in the County Prison. On the bill charging involuntary manslaughter, he was sentenced to pay a fine of $25 and costs and serve not less than 18 months or more than two years in the County Prison, this sentence to start at the expiration of the six-month sentence. On the bill charging failure to stop and render assistance to an injured party, the court suspended sentence.

"This is not a severe sentence but I hope that it will make you realize that you cannot mix liquor and automobiles," Judge Keller told McEntee. "You have a weakness for liquor and it does no good to give you any warnings. I have been informed that even since your reckless driving caused the death of two people, that you have continued to drink."

HOWARD WILLIAMS, MOTORMAN, AND MRS. ARTHUR STATES, PASSENGER, TREATED AT HOSPITAL; RELEASED

Cause of Impact Undetermined—Operator of 12-Ton Truck Escapes Injury by Jumping—Trolley and Truck Are Considerably Damaged

CORNWELLS HEIGHTS, Nov. 12.—The operator of a one-man trolley of the Trenton, Bristol and Philadelphia Railway Company, and a passenger on the car, were injured early this morning when the trolley and a 12-ton loaded truck crashed at Bristol Pike and Hulmeville Road.

Injured: Howard Williams, 51, Bridgewater, severe lacerations of both hands; slight bruises of the body.

Mrs. Arthur States, 43, Bristol Pike, Andalusia, slight laceration of the head, partial fracture of the left arm, lacerations of both limbs.

Both of the injured were discharged from the Frankford Hospital to which institution they were taken for treatment by passersby.

The cause of the accident varies, as Williams, the operator of the trolley car, and Elmer Linkens, 2526 W. Dauphin street, Philadelphia, driver of the truck for the Miller Quaker City Trucking Co., Philadelphia, give conflicting reasons.

Members of the highway patrol from South Langhorne were summoned to the scene of the crash and conducted an investigation. According to the patrolmen, Williams contends that the driver of the truck swerved the heavily-loaded vehicle and struck the trolley on the left front. The accident occurred shortly after 6 o'clock. The trolley was traveling toward Philadelphia. Linkens, according to the patrolmen, claims the trolley jumped the track and struck his truck.

The trolley was greatly damaged, the front portion of the left side being mashed in, front loosened from the chassis, and portions of the side being ripped off.

The damage to the truck was also considerable, the machine later being towed to the Miller Company's warehouse in Philadelphia. The 12-ton vehicle was loaded with merchandise, which was strewn about the highway. Linkens, who jumped as the impact occurred, was unhurt.

No arrests were made in the case.

NEEDY MAY GET FREE FUEL, STATE FORESTS

Those Who Need Wood May Obtain Permits For Cutting

HELPS THE UNEMPLOYED

HARRISBURG, Nov. 12.—Free fuelwood from the State forests of Pennsylvania is available for the relief of distress among the unemployed, according to a statement issued today by Lewis E. Staley, Secretary of the Department of Forests and Waters. State Forest officers have been authorized to issue free cutting permits in the State forests to the needy who cannot afford to buy their winter fuel.

Welfare and charitable organizations engaged in helping families during the present unemployment crisis can supply the homes of the needy by getting in touch with local district foresters and arranging for fuelwood cutting by qualified persons.

The Department already has made free wood available at the site of the Pymatuning dam where considerable clearing work is under progress. The present system will affect all localities where there are State forests.

Forestry officials estimate that in the one and one-half million acres of Pennsylvania State Forests there are 59,000 cords of wood available in the form of dead and fallen timber, and, if this amount is insufficient to supply the homes of the needy with fuel,

SOLITUDE

Solitude seems to be the basin or reservoir that underlies all kinds of genius.

In one respect all efforts of genius are alike. A poem by Keats, a musical composition by Beethoven, or a picture by Michael Angelo, really go down to the same tap root.

This is because all works of genius are conceived by the man himself, and are usually brought forth in solitude. There it is that man perceives universal beauty, and all beauty is one. Whether this beauty be expressed in poetry, or music, or religion, depends largely on the nature of the man and his inspiration.

We learn alone. No one can give us any instruction that can make of us a genius. It is something that comes to us out of the unknown and usually comes to us in our moments of solitude.

The great ideas that have transformed the world have been brought forth in solitude. They are the thoughts that appeal to the man himself individually, and do not come from the opinions of others.

That perhaps is why the best reform is always the reform of one's self and why we always look upon uplift with suspicion.

The best improvement of any man is always a growth of what is in him, a development of his own life. Even if he gets help from the outside, it is valuable only when he makes it his own.

The best education is a development of this inner force and the best educators are those who see the force and assist on to bring it forth.

This explains perhaps why so much is lost upon certain people. They get plenty of food mentally, but they are unable to assimilate it.

It explains also why such characters as Abraham Lincoln and others who have come up from obscurity to become leaders of men.

Men of affairs turn to the man who is steeped in solitude for direction.

A man has missed much who has not learned to be alone. He is alone at birth and in death, and the times that he touches the infinite in life are the times that he resorts to this solitude.

There is a growing suspicion that finances are lacking to make even a second-rate war out of the Jap-Chink bluff.

Chicago officials have done their bit in obliterating crime by congratulating the government's minions on fine work in the Capone matter.

A cinema actress, suing another to whom she leased her home, says hundreds of empty bottles were strewn about the premises. Finding one empty bottle is sufficiently disappointing.

New Yorker was found leading a triple life, just the ordinary double life having lost its kick.

Never call another man a hypocrite until your back yard is as clean as your front yard.

A failure is merely a man who thought the worst things in life were the best things.

Some men reach the age of discretion too late in life to be able to appreciate it.

READ THIS FIRST

Frank Severn has been kidnapped from his country home, Beggar's Court, apparently by persons trying to steal the fabulous and sinister Czarina Rubies. Severn's friend, Jim Wynter, enlists the help of Bill Grayson, a lawyer, and they search the grounds, discovering a secret staircase and a locked door in the ruins of an ancient chapel. While they plan to force the door a wall collapses, burying it under tons of masonry. They suspect Martin, a servant of Severn's, of dynamiting the wall. They begin to doubt also the sincerity of Sant, Severn's attorney.

In a village nearby they meet an ex-convict, Isham, who goes on crutches. Also they encounter a mysterious Dr. Martell, whose presence Martin, the servant, tries for some reason to conceal.

Grayson's wife and Katharine Farling, to whom the rubies rightfully belong by inheritance from her Russian grandfather, return to London while the two men plan to search Beggar's Court again at night. Wynter discovers Isham, his crutches laid aside, examining a motor boat in a boathouse. Martin and a thug named Frome try to shoot Wynter, who outwits and captures them. In the library Wynter finds an unsigned letter addressed to himself, which some one has opened and hidden away. It warns him that Sant is untrustworthy. He returns it to its hiding place.

NOW GO ON

CHAPTER XL

The door opened and the big smiling man bustled in with a tray of glasses and a decanter.

"Sorry to have been such a deuce of a time. But I had to go up to find out from Martin where I could lay my hands on anything to drink. The wretched man was changing out of a ruined suit of clothes—and his wife was there, too, in floods of tears, to make things damper still because he's got the order of the boot!" remarked Sant.

Not, of course, that Martin had really been dismissed. As his hearers were quite well aware, all Sant's bluster in the grounds had merely been the decorative window-dressing that an awkward countenance had demanded.

REASON TO FEAR

Sant spoke with his breezy laugh, but behind it a scarcely concealed nervousness was apparent to his two guests. He put the whisky decanter and siphon on the table and invited them to help themselves.

Had the remembrance of that carelessly left tell-tale envelope recurred to him whilst out of the room, to touch him with a sudden uneasy fear? As Jim added a splash of soda water to his whisky, his eyes followed the movements of his host that a tilted mirror on the wall reflected—saw Sant, as if casually, edge toward the waste paper basket.

What he had found in the letter must already have given Felix Sant a very bad jolt. To know that someone else, some unknown person, suspected the truth and had written of these suspicions to Severn's closest friend! He could suppress this letter—but that anonymous correspondent might write again, a letter he would possibly be unable to suppress. Jim did not envy Sant's state of mind, with the unnerving thought of the unknown figure in the dark, man or woman, who suspected the truth.

Sant's eyes had espied the envelope. In the mirror Jim saw him hastily retrieve it, doubtless with immense relief, and thrust it into his pocket.

Some of Sant's usual jaunty was back as he returned to the table. "Helping yourselves, I hope? Yes, old Felix won't refuse a shot, too—feels he needs one. That narrow escape of yours tonight, Wynter, from those two blundering fools, ... thank God, you came through an unnerving experience with no harm done!" the older man cried emotionally. "Well, here's wishing you all the best!"

Jim had to be responsive, had to raise his glass, against which Sant clinked his own with an effusive air of genial good fellowship.

But knowing the man as he did now, knowing all he knew now, to poison for him the very atmosphere of this house, Jim Wynter would have liked to put his glass down untasted.

"But you aren't going to run off yet," cried Sant, when a few minutes later Bill Grayson looked at his watch.

"Well, I think we ought to be making a move in the next five minutes. It'll be late enough by the time we get back to town," Bill said. "You're staying the night here, I suppose, Sant?"

"I fancy I shan't turn out again tonight. That's one advantage of being a bachelor. I have only my own wishes to consult!" laughed Sant. "Really, I ran over here this afternoon partly with an idea of snatching an early round of golf first thing tomorrow, to take my mind off this infernal business before I go back to the office. That's why Beggar's Court sees more of me than it otherwise would," Sant added, referring to an admirable golf course in the neighborhood.

"Well, we don't seem much nearer a solution of the Severn mystery," said Bill suddenly, "or why these unknown criminals should murder Creyke—and then spirit the dead man away from Monksilver after their crime was known. Have you any theories, Sant?"

Sant was pouring himself out a second drink. As Bill Grayson made the abrupt reference to Creyke, his hand seemed oddly shaky; he spilt some of the whisky on the table.

STRAINED

"Hopelessly in the dark, my dear chap." His voice was a little jerky and strained. "One can only hope that some unexpected clue may turn up."

"Of course. Only you don't think it very hopeful, do you?"

Sant shook his head.

Jim Wynter sat smoking almost in silence, as the other two went on talking. Until yesterday Sant was almost the last man he would have suspected; this genial popular figure, always the best of company and apparently the kindest of souls, and much in demand at functions held in aid of this or that benevolent cause. Following an after-dinner speech, moving his hearers now to laughter, now to a sudden lump in the throat, hard-faced men would be surprised at their own liberal response to his appeal.

And Sant guilty of that shameful betrayal of his friend—the moving spirit behind this plot against Frank Severn, the associated murder of Creyke!

Even yet it seemed almost unbelievable.

That first suspicion had flashed across Jim Wynter on his return to Monksilver from Dr. Martell's house. At first he had told himself that he would not even take Bill Grayson into his confidence, that Bill without further proof would only laugh at a suspicion seemingly so monstrous. But Bill, with his trained legal mind, his long experience of the criminal, had not laughed.

Those cobwebs on the door at Monksilver.

Sant had been the first at the door, had taken care, no doubt, to be the first, as he had taken care to be seen supposedly flicking away a network of cobwebs there. A very subtle ruse. A door festooned with ancient unbroken webs—how could it have been opened as lately as the night before?

Of course—it was as plain to Jim Wynter now as it had been puzzling at the time—Sant had hoped to discount in advance his story of having found Creyke murdered at Monk-silver, or of having been inside that house; had tried subtly to make the whole story appear to the police as nothing more than the delusion of a man whose drugged senses had played him a trick.

OBVIOUS

Only the unexpected proof of that jade and pearl necklace, with its conclusive evidence that he must have been at Monksilver, had been a factor for which Sant had not bargained.

And because of his certain knowledge that he had passed through that door barely fifteen hours before, Jim Wynter had known too, beyond doubt, that Sant could not have found that door as he professed, cobwebbed-up. Just a trick to deceive them, his pretence of flicking loose those cobwebs that had already been torn and broken when the door had been opened on the previous night.

It was in sudden realization that for some reason Sant had lied that had first started the train of suspicion in Jim Wynter's mind, wild as that suspicion seemed of a man he had liked and had never had the faintest cause before to mistrust.

But certainly Sant must have lied. And then in the light of that dawning suspicion, other odd facts. Sant professed skepticism that he, Wynter, had found Creyke murdered, as if he were anxious to implant seeds of doubt beforehand in the minds of the police, to germinate when they should find no dead man at Monksilver. Other facts too. . . . Well, tonight had proved beyond all question that his suspicion had been right.

Just as tonight had shown that hostilities had been opened on him. Had Frome's attempt on his life been inspired by this man whom he had known for years and liked, and who had just clinked friendly glasses with him?

Or had it been instigated without Sant's knowledge by Martell? Martell who might have recognized his voice on the telephone and seen the first flash of the red dangerlight?

Sant, Martell, Martin, Frome!

The time was not yet ripe for them to be swept into the net, but perhaps soon, very soon now!

EXCUSES

Jim Wynter dragged himself out of these preoccupied thoughts, as something Sant was saying caught his ears.

"Of course, I was furious about what happened tonight," Sant was speaking of Martin again. "Only the man's all nerves—and small wonder, really, after all that's happened at this lonely place. One must make allowances for that, eh?"

If Sant hoped for encouragement from Bill Grayson, he found the other disappointingly aloof. Bill smoked in stolid silence.

"I suppose I'm an impulsive soft hearted fool in some things," went on Sant, "but I couldn't help feeling sorry for the man just now—and still more for his wife. In fact, I may as well admit I held out a vague hope to her. Mind you, I'm not excusing Martin; far from it. But—well, I told his wife that I might reconsider the matter of Martin's dismissal."

Jim smiled inwardly. Just what he had known Sant would say, with the way to be paved for Martins continued presence at Beggars Court!

"Well, why not?" he rejoined carelessly. "After all, I didn't lose as much as a feather during their exciting target practice. And in any case I've decided not to prosecute."

After all, if their plans turned out as he hoped, Martin and Frome—and others—would find themselves in the grip of the law before very long on a more serious charge still. He was not unwilling to give them more rope. It might only hamper those plans to bring these two men into court.

Needy May Get Free Fuel, State Forests

10,000 additional cords can be released with no detriment to the remaining timber stand.

Secretary Staley announced that wood to be provided for fuel under this plan consists of blight killed chestnut and diseased and fire killed timber. This material includes both standing and fallen, dead and damaged trees, which will make excellent fuel. Special areas, easily accessible for transporting the cord-wood, will be set aside in the State Forests where cutting will be done under the supervision of State Forest officers.

No cutting may be done without a permit, and the sale or exchange of fuelwood for services or commodities will be prohibited. Fuelwood may not be cut for use in commercial enterprises, such as stores, hotels, and roadside stands. The quantity of material removed must be limited to the amount actually required by a family or families to whom permits are issued. The action of the Department of Forests and Waters insures sufficient cordwood to take care of 10,000 Pennsylvania homes during the present winter.

RED CROSS DRIVE FOR MEMBERS IS NOW ON

Many Organizations Canvass Members for 100% Enrollment

ITS 50TH ANNIVERSARY

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 12.—Join or rejoin the Red Cross for 1932!

This appeal, heralded by Red Cross Sunday on November 8th, when the need for a larger Red Cross membership was launched from some 1,200 pulpits and made visible by fifteen hundred Red Cross flags unfurled in main thoroughfares, was carried to the corners of five counties by an army of 13,000 volunteers on Armistice Day when the Fifteenth Annual Roll Call of the Red Cross was opened.

In the period between now and Thanksgiving when the Roll Call ends, it is the aim of the Southeastern Pennsylvania Chapter to enroll 175,000 members in the Counties of Philadelphia, Bucks, Delaware, Montgomery and Chester.

One of the first members to rejoin the Red Cross in Philadelphia was the Honorable Harry A. Mackey, Mayor of the City, who was signed up on the first day of the Roll Call. Industrial firms and business offices where there are 3,100 Red Cross appointees engaged in canvassing their fellow workers, began sending in first returns. Numerous organizations, among them the Knights of Columbus, have announced their intention of canvassing their memberships for 100 per cent enrollment in the Red Cross.

To facilitate enrollment, Red Cross booths have been placed at conspicuous points in railroad stations, department stores, hotels and in downtown streets. Posters, announcements on the screen of the motion picture houses, and Red Cross speakers at various meetings all serve to remind busy people that the organization of mercy is now making the single appeal for aid it launches each year on its own behalf.

This year marks also the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the Red Cross, and the membership buttons issued during the present Roll Call bear the significant date, "1881-1931." In view of the heavy existing deficit in the local Chapter, a special effort is being made to sign up members in the higher forms of membership with dues paying $5, $10 and $25 each year.

During a half-century of sustained and consistent service, the Red Cross has never failed the people of America. It is just now bringing to completion the greatest task of its peacetime existence—that of administering relief to more than ten millions of people rendered destitute by the drought of last year.

Burdened by heavy additional demands as the result of depression and unemployment, the Chapters and the National Organization will face the unusual tasks of the winter with assurance measured entirely by the size of the membership secured in the present Roll Call.

Colonel J. Franklin McFadden, Chairman of the Southeastern Pennsylvania Chapter, reminds the people of the five counties that Armistice Day is "the anniversary of one of the world's greatest days of rejoicing in history."

"Since then, the world has been mending the broken pieces from the War," Colonel McFadden continued. "But some of the broken pieces were men, not economic units, and the disabled veteran is still disabled. Though Congress has made provisions toward his aid, he is to the American Red Cross its special responsibility through its Home Service and in other ways."

"It is well to remember Armistice Day and its rejoicing, and also those earlier days when people enrolled in the American Red Cross by millions. Today it has not enough members to balance its yearly budget with less than seven out of every hundred people in Philadelphia enrolled."

"Membership in the Red Cross is not a charity but is as much a patriotic duty and obligation to humanity as it was in war-time. Its peacetime program is larger in extent, as much needed, and of equal value to the Nation."

"This obligation can only be met by the largest of the dollar, five, ten and twenty-five dollar memberships that the individual can afford."

"The Fifteenth Annual Red Cross Roll Call begins today, and volunteer workers in homes and offices will extend the invitation to enroll under the flag that knows no racial, social, political or religious boundaries—the flag of every nation—the Red Cross." Armistice Day in Philadelphia opened the Roll Call with Red Cross participation in the program of the American Legion. A platoon of Red Cross volunteers wearing the white uniforms and head-dresses of the organization, made an interesting group in the parade. The Armistice Day exercises in Independence Square which concluded the parade, were made colorful by the raising of the Red Cross flag immediately after the national colors had been broken out with appropriate ceremony.

Vincent A. Carroll, head of the American Legion in Philadelphia County, reminded his listeners that fourteen years after the close of the Great War the Red Cross is still standing by to help the veterans of that conflict and their dependent. He recalled that during 1920 the Red Cross handled 6,109 cases of ex-service men in the five counties of the chapter. In the first six months of the current year, relief has been given to 5,823 disabled ex-service men and their families.

As compensation to which disabled ex-service men are entitled under existing laws, the Red Cross has with unusual expense to the veterans aided them to obtain $665,763.44, it was pointed out.

As one of the nine agencies in Philadelphia acting on behalf of the Committee for Unemployment Relief of which Mr. Horatio Gates Lloyd is chairman, the Red Cross provided additional relief for 1,249 families where unemployment was the main cause of distress.

It was recalled also that of the budgeted Chapter expenses of about $182,000 about one-third of this is spent for service to disabled war veterans and their families.

"The Red Cross faces during 1932 greater demands than have been made upon it any time since the World War," Mr. V. A. Carroll said. "The ex-service man, usually in part-time employment because of his disability, is the first to lose his job in times like these, and the last to be re-employed."

"These former fighting men are the

Behind the Scenes in Hollywood

By HARRISON CARROLL. Copyright, 1931, Premier Syndicate.

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 00.—Early in 1932 Will Rogers is going to do a sequel to "They Had to See Paris," his first talking picture.

Homer Croy has been engaged by Fox to weave his characters into another story and of course the same players will be engaged. You'll recall Rogers was the Oklahoma oil millionaire in this film. Irene Rich played his wife, Marguerite Churchill his daughter and Rex Bell his son. If any member of the cast is not available, that character can be eliminated from the sequel.

Another story planned for Rogers is "David Harum." I imagine it will follow the Croy story. Incidentally, Fox is one of the few studios which has had success with sequels. The Flagg-Quirt series and the "Cisco Kid" stories all have made money.

FRIEND IN NEED.

Joe Lewis says he is going to give a benefit for the Malibu fire sufferers.

STILL THEY COME.

And Troy Orr, another wag, thinks it is going too far to burn down Ned Marin's home just because he is a supervisor.

GOSSIP AGAIN.

Lily Damita says her boy friend—Fred Smith—wants her to quit pictures and live in New York. Ex-claims Lily: "Can you imagine me going to bridge parties?" ... Miriam Hopkins has rented Greta Garbo's home in Beverly Hills. Privacy-loving Greta moved down the street when the public got onto her address and hung around to watch her come in and go out of the house. ... Mitzi Green will leave on a vaudeville tour in the middle of December, when her Paramount contract runs out. The studio is not renewing. Mitzi is at that awkward age, you know. ... Marguerite Churchill hasn't been with Fox for three weeks. ... If the motion picture academy really wanted a tough job, they should have picked the worst picture of the year. ... And the height of something or other is the woman who stood before the microphone at the R-K-O studio and doubled for two canary birds.

HAIR TO A NEW HIT.

What Hollywood needs is more products with a sense of humor—like B. P. Schulberg.

The Paramount executive was shown a statement by a North Carolina college professor that the average actor or actress is a moron.

"Very interesting," said B. P. "At our studio alone, 19 of the 26 actors under contract attended college and seven of them hold degrees. If colleges cannot weed out the morons, the film industry cannot be expected to."

Charlie Ruggles' comeback isn't so bad either. "Gee," he says, "it's great to be a moron and eat regularly."

IN THE NEWS.

Another well known player in Paramount's long-delayed "No One Man" will be Paul Lukas. He plays the doctor in the Rupert Hughes story. Ricardo Cortez has been borrowed from Radio for the male lead and Carole Lombard will be the heroine.

Lloyd Corrigan directs.

Sea Moss Hand Lotion

The secret of smooth, young-looking hands is simple — just this: give them a little care, often, with Sea-Moss Lotion. Cooking, cleaning and house-work dry out the natural oil, making the hands rough, red and stiff. Rub in a little Sea-Moss — it soothes and smooths the hands.

"For feminine hands and feminine nerves
I recommend the Chevrolet six"

—Miss Jessie De Both—famous authority on home economics.

Chevrolet's six-cylinder smoothness and quietness win the approval of this noted home economist, according to her representative, now conducting the Bristol Courier Homemakers School.

"Since the automobile plays so important a part in American home life, Miss De Both has naturally made a study of this subject," says her representative, Miss Grace Burroughs. "And for the feminine driver particularly, she endorses the Chevrolet six."

As Miss Burroughs goes on to explain, this endorsement is based primarily on Chevrolet's smoothness, quietness and remarkable handling ease. Because the Chevrolet is a six, your nerves are never wearied by engine noise and vibration—your muscles are never tired by the effort of driving. You glide along with never a hint of objectionable sound. You seldom need to change gears when traffic compels low speeds.

You speed up and slow down with only a gentle pressure applied to accelerator and brake pedal. You swing around corners or slip into a parking place with only a twist of the steering wheel. In fact, you can spend the day in this car, drive for mile on mile over city streets or country roads, and finish as fresh and unruffled as when you started out.

And the Chevrolet six makes another appeal to the practical feminine mind through its great economy. It is an actual fact, attested by thousands of Chevrolet owners, that the Chevrolet six costs less for gas, oil and upkeep than any other car you can buy, regardless of the number of cylinders. And Chevrolet prices, of course, are among the very lowest at which automobiles are sold.

But there is no need to take the desirability of the Chevrolet six on faith. You can prove it for yourself in a half-hour's visit at your nearest Chevrolet dealer's.

TEA TASTING STUDIED BY MISS BURROUGHS

Demonstrator, Courier Cooking School, Introduced To "Round Table"

TELLS ABOUT "INDIA"

Miss Grace Burroughs, the home economics expert who is conducting the cooking school classes here this week at the St. James's Parish House, is not only an authority on the finished product as it reaches the menu, but, of equal importance, she has a thorough knowledge of foodstuffs far pre-dating the kitchen and the ice-box stage.

A striking example of the exacting requirements presaging her appearance as a food lecturer is seen in Miss Burroughs' recent course in the intricate art of "tea tasting." Together with nine other food authorities, Miss Burroughs was introduced to the famous "round table" of New York City's great tea and coffee district at the Bureau of the India Tea planters, and there amidst some of the world's foremost tea authorities, she studied the rare art of "tea tasting."

Like the celebrated wine tasters of France, and no less expert, are the tea tasters of America, Miss Burroughs was introduced to the famous "round table" of New York City's great tea and coffee district at the Bureau of the India Tea planters, and there amidst some of the world's foremost tea authorities, she studied the rare art of "tea tasting."

Like the celebrated wine tasters of France, and no less expert, are the tea tasters of America, Miss Burroughs said today. "As America has become more and more of a tea drinking nation, it has been increasingly necessary for a greater vigilance on the part of the major tea importers to see that only the finest teas reach our shores."

"Inasmuch as most of the tea now consumed in this country comes from the 'black tea' countries, of which India is the leader, it was to the India Tea Bureau, representative headquarters in America for the world-famous tea gardens of India, that we went for authoritative and first hand information and advice not only on the fundamentals of tea itself but also on the brewing and preparation of tea. There, under the guidance of men who have devoted their lives to the growing, curing and blending of tea you can learn many surprising things about this popular beverage. For instance, you discover that Orange Pekoe, for a while so popular with many housewives, is not some mysterious and unique blend of tea bearing a flavor or an aroma or some relation to the orange. Orange Pekoe simply means the size of the tea leaf and its quality depends on where it was grown, how it was manufactured and other factors recognizable only by experts. There you will also learn that black tea, green tea, oolong tea and all teas, in fact, can and do come from the same tea bush. The only difference is in the curing or manufacturing process that they undergo after picking."

"We have discovered that American tea tastes have shifted radically in recent years. Once the reigning tea in this country was the pale liquid of the green tea blends, but today the overwhelming choice is black tea, imported largely from the vast tea plantations of old India. These India teas are not sold under any one brand name but appear in food stores in more than 140 different brands of tea, but the housewife may be sure she is getting India Tea these days by looking for the Map of India which appears on all packages, whatever the brand name, containing 50% or more India teas."

Miss Burroughs pointed out that tea is now immensely popular in this country not only because of its economic value but also because of its constantly increasing favoritism with the America palate. She added, however, that many housewives still do not get the full flavor and fragrance from their teas because of improper brewing. She suggests the following few simple rules for a "good cup of tea":

First: see that the water you use is thoroughly boiling—not merely steaming; Second: warm teapot by rinsing with scalding hot water; Third: put a level teaspoonful of India Tea into the teapot for every cup desired and one for the pot; Fourth: pour the boiling water on the tea leaves and replace cover; Fifth: let the tea brew for five minutes—no less! It requires at least five minutes to draw out the flavor of the tea. Most important, be sure to remove the tea leaves from the liquor at the end of five minutes. You can either pour the tea off into another teapot or if you use a teacup take the ball out of the pot.

ANDALUSIA

The Andalusia Troop, No. 1, Boy Scouts of America, concluded their second successful benefit at the Holme Theater last week. The boys proved themselves master salesmen and made it possible for the committee to make a substantial payment on "Lennig Cabin." It is still necessary to install a finished floor and interior wall lining which will make a comfortable meeting room for the troop this winter.

Several Andalusia people attended the oyster and chicken salad supper given by the Mechanicsville Presbyterian Church held in Byberry Hall.

Mr. and Mrs. Roswell Little, of Frankford, spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. Norman Fries. On Monday Mrs. Harry Oliver and son, Alvin, and daughter, Virginia, and Mrs. Emma Fries visited Mr. Oliver's grandmother, Mrs. Kessler, who is very ill at her home in Philadelphia.

On Saturday evening a masquerade party was held in the basement of the Andalusia Baptist Church. The following won prizes: Mrs. Payne, Mrs. Stern, Mrs. Widdoes, Heli Widdoes and Austin Larson, Gladys Osborn and Evelyn Yoder. Winner in a contest was Henrietta Hessert. The admission was a silver offering. Games were played and refreshments consisting of coffee, hot dogs, cake, nuts and cocoa were served.

On Saturday evening Mr. and Mrs. Forrest Jackson entertained Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Huey, of Siles; Mr. and Mrs. Roswell Little, of Frankford; and Mr. and Mrs. Norman Fries at cards. Eight games of pinochle were played and Mrs. Norman Fries won the first prize for women and Edgar Huey won the first prize for men. A cold lunch was served, consisting of cold boiled ham, cheese, potato salad, pickles, olives, sardines, coffee, cake and pineapple salad.

Mrs. Rochelle spent Monday in Philadelphia shopping.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Jackson and family and Philip Egert motored to Vineland on Saturday and spent the week-end.

Mr. and Mrs. Ignatius Freese and son, Jack, of Germantown, visited Mr. and Mrs. Anthony O'Donnell on Sunday.

CLIMATIC-CONTROL*

AT NO EXTRA COST

*CLIMATIC-CONTROL is the pre-adjustment of the specifications of Mobilgas so that it automatically adapts itself to the variations in "engine heat," even as high as 400° F., caused by changes in temperature, altitude, humidity and road "pull." In the Mobilgas Research Laboratories, all these changing climatic conditions have been "manufactured" in hot and cold testing chambers. Here engine tests are conducted day after day. The road performance of Mobilgas is thus scientifically verified at different "engine heats," and its specifications are pre-adjusted before it is placed on sale in your locality.

HOT ROOM TESTS (Above, left)—In this specially constructed chamber, electric heating units, controlled by thermostats, duplicate the summer temperatures of your locality. Tests are made at as high as 150 degrees F., hotter than the hottest day you have ever known. Here the "hot weather" pre-adjustment for Climatic-Control in Mobilgas is scientifically verified.

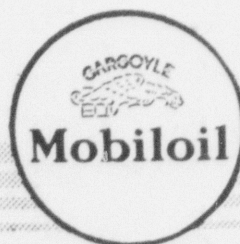

COLD ROOM TESTS (Above, right)—By turning off the heat units and turning on refrigerating apparatus, the engineers reproduce driving temperatures as low as 20 degrees below zero. This verifies scientifically the "cold weather" pre-adjustment for Climatic-Control.

"ENGINE HEAT READINGS" (Right)—On this control panel, equipped with the most delicate instruments, the exact performance of Mobilgas, under the different "engine heats" produced by the hot and cold room tests, is recorded. With this exact knowledge, the specifications of Mobilgas are pre-adjusted to provide the element of Climatic-Control.

Drawn from actual photographs made at Mobilgas Research Laboratories, Paulsboro, N. J.

GASOLINE is extremely sensitive. Every increase or decrease in "engine heat" changes the quality of its performance. Such everyday things as hot sunshine, cold winds or rain, or a long pull through thick traffic, noticeably affect the "engine heat" of your car. • That is why the makers of Mobilgas have developed Climatic-Control. • Striving always for a better fuel, they now scientifically pre-adjust Mobilgas so that it automatically adapts itself to the variations of "engine heat" caused by changing driving conditions. • To you, the motor car driver, Mobilgas now brings the highest usable level of performance at any temperature or humidity, in any weather or altitude—wherever and whenever you drive. • And Climatic-Control is added without increasing the price. Fill your tank with Mobilgas today and let your car decide.

PIONEERS UNDER-DRAWN

WALLA WALLA, Wash., Nov. 12.—Movies depicting pioneer hardships on the westward trek to the Oregon country are entirely wrong, declared Archer Butler Hulbert, director of the Stewart Commission on Western History, before a convention of 500 teachers. Difficulties encountered were really far greater, he said. Movies are to be praised, however, teachers learned, for arousing interest and enthusiasm for the heroism of those who pioneered the West.

MILLION MUSEUM VISITORS

CHICAGO, Nov. 12.—Last year more than 1,300,000 persons visited the Field Museum and from present indications that number will be greatly exceeded this year. The museum's expenditures last year were approximately $500,000 which included its share of the various 1930 expeditions.

However, only a comparatively small part of the cost of the expeditions is borne by the museum. The rest is subscribed by friends.

Miss Jessie Asay has returned to her home on Bath street, after spending two weeks with her aunt, who is ill in Camden.

SPRINGFIELD PLAYS
BRISTOL HIGH HERE

(By Leon Schiffer)

Shades of twilight were already appearing upon the scene yesterday, as Coach Townsend's Cardinal and Gray minions were put through their last practice session paces in a final attempt to round them into tip-top condition for Friday's titanic grapple with their deadly rivals, Springfield.

Starting the practice session with a special drill in the art of punting, the Bristol mentor followed this up by allowing his boys to bask in the fundamentals of blocking and tackling, while his ends and backfield men were stressed in the rudiments of the pass. The remainder of the afternoon was spent in sending the Cardinal and Gray eleven through a brief but thorough signal drill.

One year ago Friday in a blinding, biting gale, with the field in a muddy condition, the sidelines of which were dotted with mud-coated, Ken Townsend's proteges, after a close and hard-fought battle, wrested victory from out of a bleak sky to hand Springfield, at that time the besieged, a 6 to 0 overwhelming defeat.

However, Springfield, after a year's elapse of time and a brief period of rebuilding is now anxious to avenge themselves upon the Cardinal and Gray eleven and Friday the rabid fans of the community and surrounding districts will view one of the most thrilling episodes in the annals of Bucks County's football history when these two eleven meet in one of the greatest schoolboys grid classics of the state.

Telling Doyestown 12-0 in regards to Bristol's 7 to 0 setback at the hands of the latter, both teams will be testing their mettle when they meet in the supreme test on the Cardinal and Gray's gridiron Friday. Incidentally, to keep each other in the dark as much as possible, neither coach will announce their starting line-up until the toss-up.

No matter which way one views the looming tilt, it will be a battle.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—
WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas builds up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's substitute. 25c at all stores. ©1931 C. M. Co.

APPLE BOBBING AT COLLEGE

BOSTON, Nov. 12.—Boston University students and professors use the old-fashioned game of bobbing for apples to get acquainted. About 200 professors and new students rolled up their sleeves and went at it in old-time style at their annual "get-together" party. Fortune-telling and other games were additional features. President and Mrs. Daniel L. Marsh and Professors James Geddes, Marshall L. Perrin and Joseph R. Taylor, who have seen more than forty years' service at the university, took part in the affair.

CHILDREN'S DAY

SPAGHETTI LOAF

METHOD: Beat eggs slightly and add remaining ingredients. Bake in flat pan or casserole in moderate oven, 350 degrees F., about 50 minutes. Turn out onto platter and pour a cheese cream sauce over all. This will slice cold as well as hot.

SCALLOPED FLAKED FISH

METHOD: Arrange the fish and sauce in layers in a well greased baking dish. Cover with mashed potatoes and bread crumbs. Bake in moderately hot oven, 375 degrees F., until heated through and the crumbs brown on top. Layers of boiled onions or green peas may be used in this recipe.

TEA MAKING

CALIFORNIA MOCK TURKEY

METHOD: Put the meat into a roasting pan and brown at 500 degrees F. Mix spices, sugar, salt, pepper, water and vinegar. Spread over top of meat. Over all arrange slices of bacon. Return to moderately hot oven, 375 degrees F., and allow 25 minutes for each pound of meat. When sliced and served with cranberry sauce, one can scarcely tell the difference from turkey.

BAKED APRICOT PUDDING

METHOD: Soak apricots in just enough water to cover for several hours. Drain and reserve juice for a pudding sauce. Spread the slices of bread on the loaf with butter before cutting and line a baking dish with the butter side of the bread towards the dish. The baking dish should be well greased with butter before hand. Fill with apricots and sugar, cover with bread and bake in moderate oven, 375 degrees F., for half an hour.

PINEAPPLE SQUARES

METHOD: Beat egg yolks, add sugar, crumbs, pecans and pineapple. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites and bake in a moderate oven, 350 degrees F., 20 to 25 minutes. Cut in squares.

STUFFED CHERRY SALAD

METHOD: Pit the cherries and fill cavities with mixture made of blended cheese, cream and nut meats. Arrange six stuffed cherries on top of pineapple slice with cheese to outside. In center of pineapple place a preserved fig. Serve on lettuce with mayonnaise.

CANADA'S "SOFT DRINKS"

OTTAWA, CANADA, Nov. 12—There are still some people in Canada who do drink sodas, too. In the year 1930 $13,559,467 was spent for "soft drinks" in Canada. This was an 11 per cent increase in value over the figures for 1929. Figures just issued state that there are 385 plants in Canada engaged in the "aerated waters industry," as it is officially called. Canada imports comparatively little mineral and aerated waters. The total value of such imports in 1930 was $195,257 and the value of the exports was $10,917.

SEVILLE, O., Nov. 12—Bells in each of Seville's churches tolled 100 times recently in honor of D. G. Foster when he observed his 100th birthday. The aged resident also was honored with programs at the public schools.
